

AMERICA was gripped by a dramatic newsworthy this week-end—a manhunt extending half way across the continent for a paroled convict believed to have killed eight persons.

It started near here. State Police Sergeant Milton (Scrub) Mosier came by the office just before 11 o'clock Saturday night and told me about an outbreak of highway murders in eastern Oklahoma which had caused Arkansas to mass its own officers on the state line near DeQueen.

Mosier had just come back from DeQueen. We went out to the radio station, where the (AP) teletype came at night, and while we were looking at it there came another dispatch—the killer was in California, and had kidnapped and slain another victim. Police photos and witnesses marked the trail from here to the Imperial Valley.

The hunted man is William Edward Cook, 24, of Joplin, paroled convict from the Missouri penitentiary.

And there is a commentary on American justice—as busy managing the release of known criminals as it is in catching them.

It's asking a whole lot of police officers to risk their lives against blazing guns when, no sooner is a criminal locked up, someone immediately starts scheming to set him free.

The families of Cook's eight victims ought to arrange for an introduction to the Missouri politicians who turned him loose.

THIS ISN'T pertinent to the fatal accident at the Hotel Barlow corner Saturday night, where there are no electric traffic lights, but it does apply to other downtown intersections that do have automatic signals.

Motor drivers are violating the law every hour of the day by running through the red light when making a right-hand turn.

When Hope installed electric traffic lights the code said—and it's the same all over America—that you can make a right-hand turn on the "red" only after first coming to a full stop.

A pedestrian crossing the street on the "green" has the right-of-way, and the driver failing to make a full stop on the "red," is violating the law and threatening the safety of pedestrians.

Take a position on the curb at the Checkerboard cafe corner—Third and Main streets—and note the truth of what I say. Drivers wheel off Third street into Main without even pausing when the light is against them.

Hope police should arrest every one of them.

The Star has pointed out this glaring traffic violation several times before now.

Let's get on it—today.

France to Give First Troops to Eisenhower

Paris, Jan. 8.—(AP)—France today formally gives Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower the first contingent of European troops that will serve under his flag as supreme Atlantic army commander.

The famed World War II leader arrived in Paris yesterday to head an international force to defend the West against communism. At once he served warning that any nation, emptied to test the power of the West had better think long and carefully about starting anything.

Eisenhower's arrival here marks his first formal visit to one of the European powers that will give him men and machines for the army the 12-nation Atlantic community has asked him to create to fend off aggression from the East.

After a quick tour of the North Atlantic treaty countries, Eisenhower is slated to return to Washington late this month. He comes back here around mid-February to begin the task of putting into full operation his supreme headquarters Allied powers in Europe.

In tones as confident as though he had 100 divisions at his command, instead of the dozen or so ready for him to lead, Eisenhower declared yesterday:

"Aroused and united, there is nothing which the nations of the Atlantic community cannot achieve. Let those who might be tempted to put this power to the test, ponder well the lessons of history. The cause of freedom can never be defeated.

"I am here," he declared, "because the United States believes with the rest of the Western world that we have, not only the right, but the duty to protect the culture which has been spreading out through the world."

Making it clear that each European member of the Atlantic community "must still continue the hard core of its own defense," Eisenhower said "no amount of outside aid alone could defend Europe."

Bloody Trail of Slayer Winds Into Mexico

Blythe, Calif., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The frantic, bloody trail of badman Bill Cook winds through the barren reaches of northwestern Mexico today.

The territorial police of Baja, California joined the far-flung search for the sawed-off, boastful killer after the car of one of his victims was found abandoned 40 miles south of the border yesterday.

Officers of the state of Sonora were alerted to watch for the stocky desperado in case he might try to cross the Colorado river and head south deep into Mexico. It was apparent from tire tracks near the abandoned car that Cook had commandeered another vehicle—at the expense of another and perhaps his ninth victim.

Officers said the tracks indicate Cook had headed north. The 24-year-old ex-convict from Joplin, Mo., the object of one of the West's greatest manhunts, may be forced to turn back toward the U. S. border by the very nature of the barren desert country to which he has fled.

The FBI and scores of other officers waiting at the border were gambling that two nights on the desert might force Cook to try to run the risk of re-entry into the U. S. He is heavily armed.

The 1947 blue Buick sedan of Robert H. Dewey, 32, of Seattle, was discovered by Police Chief Guy Woodward of El Centro, Calif., who on a hunch drove south from the border town of Mexicali.

Woodward reported to the FBI that there were bloodstains on the front seat and the license plates were missing from the car. Two army toolboxes and letters in the glove compartment bore the name "Dewey." Two rifles were missing from the car.

Dewey's body was found near Ogilby, Calif., Saturday in a sheriff's car after Cook had kidnapped and thrown out Deputy Homer Waltrip, 27, of Blythe. Earlier, Cook was sought throughout Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma for questioning about the missing family of Carl Mosser, his wife and three children from Atwood, Ill.

"I've murdered seven other people and I would just as soon murder you," Waltrip quoted the desperado whom he recognize as a former dishwasher in a Blythe restaurant. The deputy said Cook added he had killed two men in Oklahoma and buried them in a snowdrift.

Search for the Mossers' bodies narrowed to the area between Okmulgee and Henryetta, Okla. Cook was last seen with the Mossers last Monday. Their blood-spattered car was found Wednesday near Tulsa.

S. Easterling Hit by Car at Barlow, Dies

Silas Easterling, 48 Hope carpenter and painter, was struck and fatally injured by an automobile in front of Hotel Barlow early Saturday night. He died in Julia Chester hospital at 11 p.m.

The driver of the car, Billy Burns, 17-year-old son of Glen Burns, living nine miles south of Hope, was charged with reckless driving, but police said was a technical charge only, their investigation clearing young Burns of any homicide count.

The Easterling funeral will be held at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon from Hope Gospel Tabernacle, the Rev. H. Paul Holdridge officiating, with burial in Rose Hill cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Glen Easterling; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Easterling, of Hope; two daughters, Shirley Mae and Bonnie Sue Easterling; one brother, Edgar, of Hope; and three sisters, Mrs. Opal McLain, Hope; Mrs. Louis Brumfield, Texarkana; and Mrs. Ruby Martin, of Beltsville, Md.

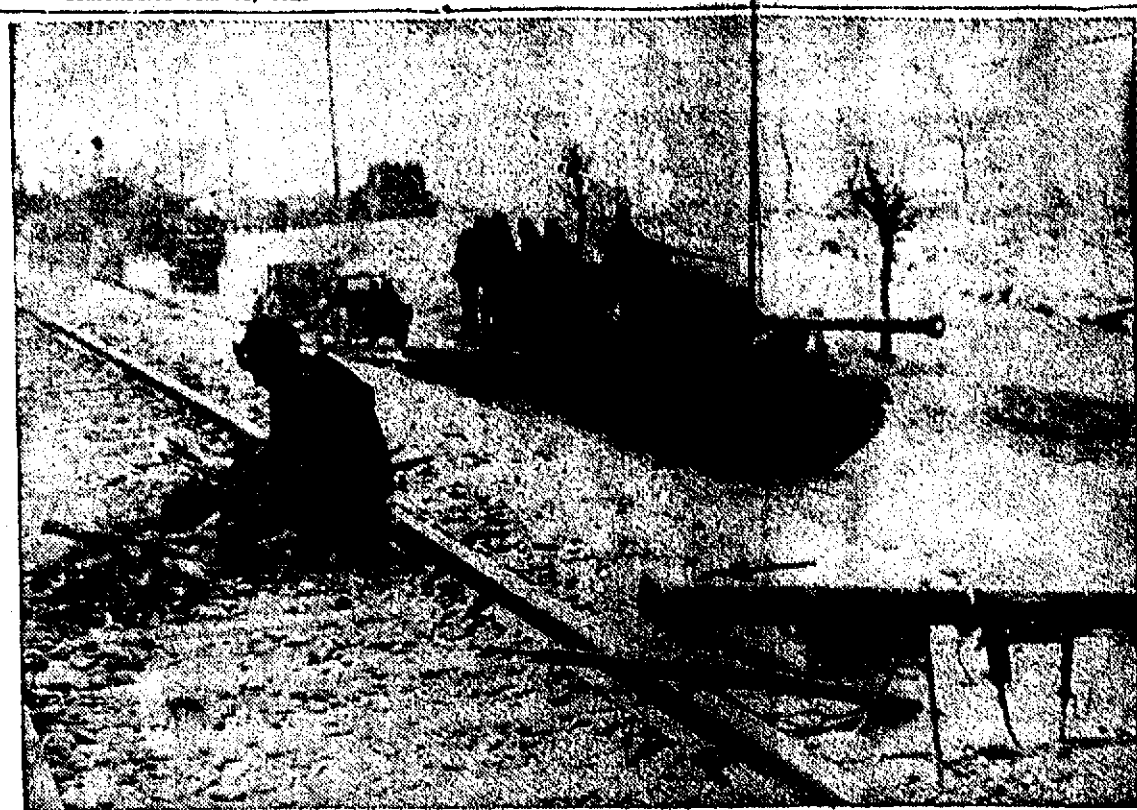

Active pallbearers: Louis Sutton, W. W. White, Floyd Osborn, Julian Fields and Carl Bradshaw.

M. W. Muldrow, Extension Animal Husbandman, University of Arkansas, will meet with beef cattle producers Wednesday morning, January 10th, at 10:00 in the Hope City Hall Municipal Courtroom, announced Oliver L. Adams, County Agent, today.

This is a general meeting where beef producers may get together on their information and problems. All beef producers are invited.

McMath and Legislators Meet Secretly

Little Rock, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Reports that Governor McMath had met secretly with about 50 legislators circulated today a few hours before the 58th general assembly was to convene at noon.

Several members of the legislature, who asked that they not be identified, said McMath discussed his proposed tax program at great length with the group yesterday.

The legislator said he doubted the accuracy of the $6,000,000 figure, adding that he thought would take about $2,500,000 to permit the schools to operate for a full nine-month term.

The source said the schools probably could use $6,000,000 "or $10,000,000 if he would give it to them."

The governor reportedly will ask the legislature, in his inaugural address at 11 a. m. tomorrow, for taxes to raise an additional $17,000,000 in revenue for Arkansas. It was reported the governor will ask for:

1. A two cent per bottle tax on soft drinks;
 2. An increase in the cigarette tax from four to six cents;
 3. A one dollar increase on a gallon of whiskey;
 4. Higher state income taxes.
- A senator, who asked that he not be named, said that some of McMath's tax program probably would get by with little difficulty. As for the others, he said, "I don't know of a single senator who is willing to go all the way with him (McMath)."

Two Injured in Collision Near McNab

Two automobile wrecks were reported by officers over the weekend and one left two young girls seriously injured in a local hospital.

Blinded by oncoming lights of a car, a truck driven by U. D. Dildy of Okay crashed into the back of a truck parked on the highway between Fulton and McNab about 7 o'clock last night.

Sonja Larue Dildy, 13, of Okay and Fern Mills of Schaal, Ark., riding in the car, were seriously hurt. Miss Dildy suffered a broken arm and leg and face injuries while Miss Mills sustained serious cuts and bruises.

Deputy Sheriff Allen Shipp investigated the accident and said this morning the owner of the parked truck had tentatively been identified as a McNab negro although this report had not been verified. He did not know who left the truck on the highway. An investigation continues.

Here in Hope an auto driven by Jessie Lee James collided with another driven by Arthur Nichols, downtown on South Main, resulting in minor damage.

In Real Life Judy Holliday Is a Beautiful Blonde That Had to Learn to Be Dumb

By SAUL PETT For Hal Boyle

New York, — (AP)— In the new movie, "Born Yesterday," which has ignited talk of an academy award for Judy Holliday, she plays a beautiful dumb blonde who learns to be an intellectual.

Corny but true, the fact is that in real life Judy Holliday is a beautiful blond intellectual who had to learn to be dumb.

And so she found life in Hollywood very dull.

"Making pictures is fine," she said. "It's stimulating, exciting, I respect and love it."

"But the social life is deadly. Go to a party and you always meet the same people talking about the same thing—pictures. The urgent topic of conversation is: Are you on the way up, or on the way down, or on the inside or outside?"

"You're weighed the second you walk into a room. You can almost see the minds working: 'What's she wearing? What did her last picture gross? Who did she come with?'"

"If you happen to have an outside interest, a columnist hangs a story on it. And then it's no longer private, no longer your own. 'If you don't happen to know, you're bound. There are always the interviews with the fan magazines. And they always appear this way: 'It was confirmed by a pair of sparkling brown eyes, and I just knew it had to be Judy Holliday.'"

U.S. Would Negotiate Honorable Settlement But No Appeasement

Ally Rearguard Yields Ruins of Wonju to Reds

Tokyo, Jan. 8.—(AP)— Allied rearguard forces yielded the ruins of Wonju to an overwhelming horde of Chinese and North Korean Reds today after a bitter holding action that bought precious time.

Red troops entered the burning road and rail center as U. N. forces withdrew to new positions. The Allies had fought fiercely for the city, 55 miles southeast of Seoul, to buy time for the main body of U. N. forces to retreat Southwestward from Seoul on the road leading to the southeast port of Pusan.

Wonju's defenders battled Saturday, Sunday and Sunday night to keep the Red hordes from sweeping into the gateway city to the heart of South Korea. A web of roads lead from Wonju into the interior.

Held at bay by the grim defenders were seven Chinese armies, possibly 210,000 men, and their Korean Red comrades.

Then the defenders abandoned the town and its airstrip. Allied warplanes strafed and fire-bombed Wonju after the withdrawal. An ammunition train was blown up.

U. S. Eighth Army headquarters said Allied casualties were light during the holding action. Headquarters said fighting continued in the Wonju area, east and west of the city.

One-l battalion counterattacked Monday morning, but pulled back after a brief fight. Planes attacked Reds on ridges on Wonju's flanks.

The Allied rearguard still was fighting desperately to block the Reds from a southward sweep that would menace them in a body of U. N. troops.

General MacArthur's summary, timed at 2:40 p. m. (12:40 a. m. EST), had reported U. N. troops north of Wonju had withdrawn, but gave no indication they had given up the city. About noon, a U. S. Eighth army spokesman said: "As of the early hours today (Monday) we still controlled Wonju."

MacArthur's summary said heavy casualties were inflicted on the Reds. It reported Allied troops had withstood heavy pressure on Wonju's east side.

The Communists had penetrated the devastated city's outskirts Sunday only to be hurled out by a counterattack. So fierce was Allied resistance that air observers saw Red troops digging in two miles east of the town. In on eight, Wonju's defenders killed 470 North Koreans and took 74 prisoners.

A Correspondent Don Huth, at U. S. Eighth Army headquarters, reported the siege of Wonju Sunday was fierce. East of the town the Reds blew up 37 railroad cars in the hopes of thus depriving the defenders of needed supplies.

After falling in Sunday morning's brief penetration, the Reds poured intense small arms and automatic weapons fire into Wonju between 7 and 7:30 p. m. Sunday.

In west Korea, Red troops were fanning out from Suwon, 20 miles south of Seoul. U. N. rearguard patrols spotted Red forces 17 miles southeast of Suwon.

There were no contacts reported by noon Monday either with Chinese advancing down the west coast or with North Koreans moving south down the mountainous east coast.

Along both coasts, warships and carrier-based planes hammered at supply points and communications lines. They sought to slow the twin southward drive on each side of the peninsula.

British Fireflies an d Sea Furies from the carrier Theseus teamed up with U. S. marine pilots from the carriers Bataan and Sicily in pounding the Seoul-Pyongyang-Chinnampo triangle in West Korea. The planes attacked warehouses and supply dumps.

Clearing skies Monday brought out Allied fighters and bombers in strength after had weather hampered air activity Sunday.

B-29 superfortresses dropped 140 tons of bombs on Kimpo airfield in the first big strategic raid on Korea's last airbase since Allied forces abandoned it last week. Kimpo is 14 miles northwest of Seoul.

B-29 Air Force (AF) headquarters said the attack was a "demonstration of our ability to strike at will at any time and from any direction."

Railway Labor Dispute Heads for White House

St. Louis, Jan. 8.—(AP)— The 22-month-old railway labor dispute appeared headed back to the White House today after its rejection by the Order of Railway Conductors.

The conductors union was the last of the four brotherhoods to turn thumbs down on the agreement proposed by the White House Dec. 21. Its decision was announced yesterday.

R. O. Hughes, president of the conductors, said he would be in Washington Wednesday for further conferences with Dr. John R. Steelman, presidential adviser. Officials from the locomotive engineers, the firemen and engine-men and the railroad trainmen would also be there, he said.

All four brotherhoods declared they wanted more favorable terms.

The dispute began in March 1949, and breakdown in negotiations resulted in government seizure of the roads last Aug. 25. The White House proposal had appeared to have smooth sailing when it was announced. Halted as a three-year peace pact, top railway and union officials taking part in the negotiations had accepted it. But when the brotherhoods turned it down, the dispute currently seems further from settlement than ever.

No Support for U. S. Plan to Brand China

Lake Success, Jan. 8.—(AP)— The United States still lacked sufficient United Nations support today to insure adoption of an anti-Communist resolution to condemn Communist China as an aggressor.

Conferences seeking support of the planned U. S. move continued. Because of the strong American attitude, India and other members refrained from bringing proposals which the U. S. feared would give the impression of knocking under to Red China.

Previously either the U. S. resolution or one from the "Neutral" block, or both, had been expected for introduction at today's meeting of the 60 nation political committee.

The U. S. is carrying on intensive talks with other non-Communist nations in an attempt to heal the breach in their points of view.

The U. S. feels that U. N. failure to denounce Communist Chinese intervention in Korea could lead to the collapse of the ideal of collective security. Its representatives have also been stressing the possible effect inaction could have on American public opinion toward the U. N.

Many other non-Communist nations fear that overly strong action would lead to a disastrous war in the Far East and possibly to an immediate all-out atomic World War II.

American sources are confident they will have lined up enough votes by the end of the week to assure passage of the condemnation resolution. After that, the U. S. wants the 14-nation collective measures committee, set up under the assembly's new veto-proof anti-aggression procedure, to consider further steps—such as economic, diplomatic or political sanctions.

If we are truly responsible as individuals, I am sure that we will be united as a government."

Washington, Jan. 8 —(AP)—President Truman goes before Congress today to ask approval of greater national sacrifices — in services and money — to speed preparations by America and its allies against new Communist attacks.

As the basis for these requests to the new Congress, his Capital Hill lieutenant expected the chief executive to defend vigorously his policy of countering Communist forces with force in Korea and of helping Western European to re-arm.

Mr. Truman arranged to deliver his annual "State of the Union" message personally to a joint session in the House chamber. The nation could see or hear its delivery on any of the major television or radio networks.

Despite the grim military situation in Korea and the threat of new Communist aggression elsewhere, Mr. Truman was expected to hold out hope for peaceful settlement of the world's problems.

For the President did may involve outlining in detail his foreign policy, which have been under attack and growing attack from Republican leaders in and out of Congress.

These GOP lawmakers and others will measure any bid for national unity by what the President has in say on specific issues.

For the third Congress which embarked on its two-year life last Wednesday, the presidential message marks the beginning of a struggle with problems greater than any faced by lawmakers since World War II, and generally conceded to be among the toughest in the nation's history.

He asked everyone to put "our country ahead of our party, and ahead of our own personal interests."

The $6,000,000,000 a year figure used by Mr. Truman was the same used by the late President Roosevelt in May, 1940, when the nation began going full scale into defensive preparations for a war that hit a year and a half later.

The aviation industry association estimated that when the Korean war started the United States was producing only 215 military aircraft a month.

At the peak of plane production — in March, 1944, the United States turned out 3,115 military planes.

When Mr. Roosevelt set the 50,000 goal, the monthly production rate was about 460.

The present peak production program calls for about 4,000 tanks, the majority of them medium, 47-ton vehicles.

The President said the 32nd Congress faces a task as big as any in the history of our FARMERS AREN'T BEEFING—As the Newschart above shows, farmers are now getting over 100 per cent of parity—the so-called fair price—for beef, lamb and veal. Under price-control law, government can only fix prices of farm products on which farmers are getting 100 per cent of parity or more. Hence it's being argued in some quarters that it would be wise—from consumer's standpoint—for the U. S. to place what meats it can under price-control law. Despite ominous signs, however, Price Administrator DiSalle says meat ceilings are not imminent.

Remington Perjury Trial in 3rd Week

New York, Jan. 8 —(AP)—William W. Remington's federal perjury trial enters its third week today with the former commerce department economist's original accuser, Miss Elizabeth Bentley, still to be heard from.

Remington, 33, is charged with lying when he denied under oath before a federal grand jury last May that he ever was a Communist.

The prosecution has called numerous witnesses, including Remington's former wife, in an effort to prove its case.

But Miss Bentley, whose impending testimony stirred a court room

ESA Will Try to Control Meat Prices

Washington, Jan. 8 —(AP)—Economic stabilization administrator Alan Valentine said today "a big try" will be made "as soon as we can" to control skyrocketing meat prices.

He hinted broadly that the effort might be accompanied by rationing and "probably subsidies."

"The real fact is we don't know to what extent meat prices can be controlled, but as soon as we can we'll make a try at it, and it will be a big try," Valentine said.

This statement, made in an interview with the weekly news magazine "U. S. News and World Report," coincided significantly with a speedup in the agency's drive to build up a staff big enough for the gigantic job of controlling prices and wages. Valentine ordered the recruiting stepup.

In promising an attempt at controlling meat prices, the ESA chief indicated that he considered food costs a major obstacle in the path wrangle last week, has not taken the witness stand.

Her testimony had been forecast twice last week, and when she did not appear there were reports that she might not be called.

However, the prosecution has indicated every intention of calling her and it has successfully blocked defense attempts to prevent testimony by Miss Bentley, self-admitted former spy courier.

Miss Bentley first accused Remington in July, 1948, when she said he passed information to her for relay to Soviet agents.

He then sued her, and a television program over which she repeated her charges, for libel damages. He later accepted a reported $10,000 settlement from the television program.

Remington's attorney moved last Tuesday that Miss Bentley should not be allowed to testify, on the grounds he would not be able to cross-examine her properly. He charged the government might have briefed her on sealed defense papers, relating to the libel action.

U. S. Attorney Irving H. Saypol denied improper use had been made of the papers and that Miss Bentley had been coached.

Federal Judge Gregory F. Noonan then denied the defense motion, clearing the way for Miss Bentley's testimony.

Miss Bentley already has been mentioned frequently in testimony by other government witnesses at the trial.

though the answers were few and not too satisfying. After driving for what seemed like hours, the traffic thinned out, the great electric signs became smaller and fewer. May saw a policeman standing at an intersection directing traffic. She pulled up beside him and asked where they might look for a room.

The policeman put his weather-beaten face into the car and glowered at her. "Watcher looking for, lady, a hotel?"

May quipped, "A furnished room if I could find one."

"Well, you ain't gonna find one on Riverside Drive. Go over to Amsterdam or Columbus. Run up and down the side streets. Look for a sign in a window."

May guessed from the direction in which he had pointed where Amsterdam and Columbus might be. After an hour of cruising, watching for signs in windows, May finally rang the doorbell of a brown stone house that had a card in the front window reading "VACANCY."

A stout, matronly woman responded to the ring. As the door opened, a stale, dank smell assailed May.

While May and Judy climbed the stairs to the second floor and then stood inspecting the diminutive front room and its dowdy furniture the landlady kept up a running string of comment on the rarity of a vacant room these days, offering not one but several veracious explanations as to why this room was unoccupied, and what clean, neat tenants it had had before. May was worn out from the long drive and the terrifying experience of confronting Manhattan traffic.

"How much is it?" she asked. "And where's the bathroom?"

"The bath's down the hall. I'll show you the room. It's a week's work in advance."

"What if I don't stay a week?"

"The woman asked, 'Are you staying on a month's basis?'"

"I'm staying on a month's basis," May said.

"That's all right," the landlady said. "You can stay on a month's basis."

"That's all right," the landlady said. "You can stay on a month's basis."

of possible new wage controls. Asked if "the lack of any control of meat makes it impossible to handle the stabilization of wages," he answered:

"That's the point. Not impossible, but difficult."

Valentine said he had not "come on a single man in the industry who feels that, without strict rationing and probably subsidies, meat prices can be controlled, really controlled."

And without such control, he said the so-called escalator agreements in some labor contracts might tend to keep wages creeping higher. Escalator agreements call for pay increases to meet rising living costs.

In answer to another question, he said his agency has not ordered any ration books printed.

Valentine said ESA needs more full-time recruits at all levels to handle "not only the present job but the kind of job we envisage a minimum, two or three months from now."

The new agency still has only 204 permanent employees, although its staff has been quadrupled since Dec. 1. Counting consultants and persons on temporary loan from other agencies, the present total is around 850.

Many thousands will be needed. President Truman has said price and wage controls will be put into effect across the board as fast as they are needed and physically possible.

The clamor increased in Congress, meanwhile, for food price controls aimed primarily at wholesalers and other middlemen instead of farmer producers.

Fresh support for such a course was voiced as the lawmakers awaited President Truman's state of the union message, which he indicated last week might include a request for new legislation to open the way for general control of farm prices and food costs.

Under the present law and current circumstances, agricultural commodities cannot be brought under price control until the farmer receives more than parity for them. Several important commodities have not yet reached that level.

Parity is a formula designed to assure farmers a favorable return for their products in relation to the price of things they buy.

Mr. Truman has said that before there can be wage-price controls on an overall basis, something would have to be done about the restriction regarding farm price curbs.

That touched off a round of objections in Congress. Farm state lawmakers said farm prices were not the cause of the high retail cost of food. They said processors and other middlemen were to blame.

Senator Flanders (R-Vt.) told a reporter today he agrees with that conclusion and that the thing to do is freeze the markups of wholesalers at a normal level — "at levels which prevailed before those people increased them in anticipation of price control."

BADGE OF A MAN

How proud can a man be?

Only when you're wearing the Combat Infantryman's Badge on your chest—Because here is the emblem that marks a man—

A man with the heart and the will to serve his country as a member of the front-line fighting force, man who has seen the face of the enemy. He has earned it for you—with a sign on his chest that says "MEN ONLY!"

For the men who are the backbone of our fighting force, the Combat Infantryman's Badge is a symbol of honor and pride. It is a badge that only men who have served in the front lines can earn.

It is a badge that is a source of great pride and honor for the men who earn it. It is a badge that is a symbol of the courage and sacrifice of the men who serve in the front lines of our fighting force.

THE STORY: Paul Twine, a former Navy aviator, has kidnapped Judy Twine, his 18-year-old daughter. He has been living with her, knowing another who had been kidnapping her and in spite of the fact that Paul is a kidnapper, much public sympathy has been aroused in his favor. His motive may be anything, a romance, a cool, calculated move, and where May suspects sympathy for Paul, he suspects his identity. May has a plan to get to New York, where Paul has a friend, Martin Jacobson, a man captain who might take them somewhere to begin a new life. Judy is to be dressed as a boy and May will pose as her mother. Or, better yet, May will be looking for a man and a small girl, instead of a man, woman and boy. As they start out for New York, they read the paper and learn that authorities are looking for a man and a small girl, instead of a man, woman and boy. As they start out for New York, they read the paper and learn that authorities are looking for a man and a small girl, instead of a man, woman and boy.

PAUL TWINE shook his head in answer to May's question. "No," he said. "I won't give myself up. I decided what I would do when I started this thing."

"But," May declared, "everybody is for you."

"Thank," Paul smiled at her, "when you're turned in the hundred

"Checkpoints."

"What are checkpoints?" Judy asked.

Paul laughed. "Your question," he said, "is the answer to it."

"They're funny people," Paul laughed. He became serious then and turned to May to discuss their next move. He feared that his approach to New York might be watched. His

DOROTHY DIX
Woman's Place

Dear Miss Dix: I dispute strongly all that is said about women's place being in the home. I believe that the absolute lying-down of women to their own fireside has been their complete downfall and has made them morbid, irrational, narrow-minded and selfish. Women should be a chum and companion to man.

AN INTERESTED READER

Answer: Whether a woman's place is in the home or not depends on the woman and her individual talents and inclinations and circumstances and on the home. You cannot lay down any hard and fast rule on the subject.

There are women that nature never intended to be homemakers. There are other women to whom home is the realization of every ambition and dream. Home isn't a prison to all women, as you may seem to think it is. Nor are all home-keeping women stupid and narrow and neurotic. To vast numbers of women homemaking is the most interesting and exciting and satisfying occupation on earth.

They find joy in expressing their artistic taste by making it beautiful. They make of their home a fine art. And they have a sense of supreme satisfaction in knowing they are making a place of peace and rest and comfort for their husbands and giving their children an environment that will develop all that is good in their characters.

No injustice

It just happens that in the division of labor in the domestic partnership, making the home is the woman's job as supporting it is the man's, and there is no injustice in that that I can see nor any belittling of the woman.

Of course, there are conditions of financial stress in which it becomes absolutely necessary for the woman to work outside of the home and help earn the bread as well as bake it. But when there are children it is a tragedy for the mother not to be able to devote all of her time to making them a comfortable home and keeping them safe within it. No school, no hired nurse or child specialist can give a child what its mother can. There is no synthetic motherhood that takes the place of a real mother in a real home.

So I think that the woman who keeps the home fires burning does the biggest job and the most important one in the world, and the one that pays the biggest percentage if she turns out good work.

Dear Miss Dix: How should a woman conduct herself when living with her daughter-in-law? Is there any way she can avoid interfering with the home life of the family? I have four children. Wouldn't it be best to spend a few months with each one so I will not wear out any welcome in any one place? My daughters-in-law seem to like me and try to plan for my pleasure. I know they will grow tired of that, therefore I rarely go anywhere they ask me to, but always insist that they go on without me. They usually and seem happy about it.

MOTHER

Answer: You seem to have solved for yourself the problem of living in another woman's house, which is a difficult thing whether the woman is one's own daughter or one's daughter-in-law.

It consists primarily in keeping your fingers out of the family pie. The inalienable right of every woman who is in the head of a house is to run it in her own way without advice or interference.

As long as Grandma respects their rights, she is a welcome guest. It is only when she tries to superimpose her ideas on her daughter and her daughter-in-law that the fight begins.

You are also very wise in not feeling that you always have to go out with your in-laws. Old peacemaker and young people do not mix the same things and by finding your own pleasures in your own way you keep from being a social burden upon them. And you are most wise to divide your time among all of your children instead of staying just with one. Short visits make long friends, as the old proverb puts it, in families as well as among strangers.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a girl engaged to be married to a very fine young man who loves me dearly. I believe myself to be in love with him. The only thing that makes me doubt it is that ever so often I become foolishly infatuated with some one else. I always get over it and go back to my fiance. Am I just kidding myself when I say I am in love with him, or are these affairs just temporary madness?

Answer: You are certainly not in love with the young man to whom you are engaged if you cannot be true to him even before marriage. My diagnosis of your symptoms is that you are a born philanderer and that no one man will ever satisfy you. You will always want the excitement of affairs with other men.

The phrase that strikes terror to the hearts of parents, that makes their backbones turn to jelly and their knees give way under them, is the hurried at them daily and hourly by their offspring when they seek to control them and steer them into the paths of righteousness. This dread phrase is:

All the kids are doing it.

That is the unanswerable reply to every protest, to every argument to every prayer and entreaty.

and before it mothers and fathers are helpless. All the kids are doing it, and no matter how wrong, how dangerous, how foolish, how inexpedient it is, their children are going to do it, too, and nothing that the parents can do is going to prevent their doing it.

It makes fathers physically sick to see their young daughters go about dressed with a lack of decency, but all of his lectures on modesty fall on deaf ears. Father knows what tobacco and liquor do to immature children, but all the other boys and girls are drinking and smoking and he is powerless to keep his own from cocktails and cigarettes.

Needless Worries

Mother gets nervous prostration from lying awake at night wondering why Mamie, who went to the movies, doesn't get home until dawn. But all the other girls stay out late, and nothing that Mother can say about the danger and the impropriety of it will keep Mamie from going too.

All the kids are doing it, and your children and mine must do what the neighbors' children are doing, and we can't keep them doing it without making them think that we are grinding tyrants who are trying to crush all the joy out of life for them, and that they are persecuted martyrs. For youth's ideal is the rubber stamp. It wants to be exactly like its fellows. It must wear the same clothes, eat the same food, dance the same steps, say the same things, hold the same opinions, belong to the same organizations. Originality is the unforgivable crime to it. To be different from the others makes one a weird.

Such being the case, parents are helpless before their children's cry that they must do what the other kids are doing, because it is true that if they do not run with the pack they are left behind. Cut out of everything. If Mary's parents make her come home from a party at 11 o'clock, she is soon dropped from everybody's invitation list. If Sally's parents park themselves in the room when boys call, the boys never come back a second time.

If Maggie and Jenny and Sadie are not permitted to go riding with boys or to dance they sit at home with Mamie Papa. If Geraldine's parents think that a girl should never go out with a boy until she is 20, the chances are that she will never go out with one at all. Many an old maid is the result of having been sidetracked by her parents because they wouldn't let her do what the other girls did.

They Should Organize
So that phase of the matter must be considered, and the solu-

Annexation Suit Filed at El Dorado

Little Rock, Jan. 8 — (AP) — A legal move to block annexation of land to El Dorado will be carried to the U. S. Supreme court.

A group of Union county residents headed by N. C. Marsh, Jr., today received permission to appeal to the federal court. The authority came from the Arkansas Supreme court.

Litigation stems from an election held in El Dorado, April 5, 1948, in which the vote for annexation was 1,014 and 244 votes were cast against annexation.

Twelve days later Marsh filed petition in Union county court challenging the right of the city to follow through with the annexation of the land.

Marsh contended:

1. The land proposed to be annexed was not for use as town lots.

2. The land did not represent the actual growth of the city beyond its regular boundaries.

3. The lands were not needed by the city for the extension of streets, sewers, a natural gas or water systems.

4. That the election was not sufficient authority for the city of the problem is for fathers and mothers to get together and organize the Amalgamated Parents Association with ironclad rules and regulations that will establish the canons of taste and conduct for the young in their communities. For in union there is strength, and what no one father and mother can do, the combined parenthood of the country can accomplish.

If no adolescent boy and girl were given a car with which to commit suicide and murder, no boy and girl would think that father was a grouchy and a tightwad if he did not provide them with an automobile. If all parties began early and ended early, the youngsters would have just as good a time and wouldn't ruin their health with late hours. For all that the young want is just to do what the other kids are doing.

And it is up to the parents to unite in a mass movement and see that they do the right thing instead of the wrong thing.

to acquire the land.

5. That the people living in the proposed annexation area were not permitted to vote in the election.

The county court upheld Marsh's petition but the city appealed to the Union Circuit court which then upheld the annexation.

Marsh then appealed to the Arkansas Supreme court, which affirmed the circuit court's decision.

The Supreme court said there was substantial proof to show that the city of El Dorado needed the land for growth.

The court also said that territory adjacent to a city may be annexed into a municipality by a vote of a majority of the electors within the municipality only that x x x (the Arkansas constitution provides for this election) is constitutional.

The Supreme court did not give down any opinions today.

An official of the court said because of numerous oral arguments heard last week, judges were not able to delve into the file.

Flame Cooking IS EXACT

Every expert chef knows his cooking temperature doesn't like to be handicapped by limited heat. Especially is this true of Dad who cooks his Sunday dishes and plays to the satisfaction of his family and his friends. Each time he cooks the exact temperature at the stove is just what which natural GAS delivers. That's why the chefs who know perfection all agree — "GAS IS EXACT!"

Speculation on What Reds Will Pull Next

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Jan. 8 —(AP)— Will the Russians attack this spring? It's a nice question. But it seems to have been lost in the uproar over the big foreign policy debate.

The debate, if it could be boiled down to a few simple questions, would go like this:

1. Should we refuse to send any troops to Europe until Europe has enough troops of its own to defend itself?

(Western Europe wouldn't have enough time between now and spring to build such a force.)

2. Should we send more troops to Europe but not before that is ironclad evidence that Western Europe will go all-out in building defenses?

(Even if Europe gives such evidence, it can hardly assemble by spring a land force big enough to stop the Russians if they start.)

3. Should we go ahead with plans for sending troops to Europe, acting in the belief it will most earnestly begin building defenses?

(By spring this country couldn't pour any vast number of troops into Europe, no matter what the plans might call for eventually.)

It probably would be a couple of years before this country and Europe together could put enough ground troops in uniform to stop Russia.

It would be nice of the Russians, of course, if they waited until Western Europe's defenses were so built up Russia wouldn't dare attack.

Maybe Russia has different ideas. Western Europe is weak now and the Russians have about 4,000,000 men under arms and might be able to throw another 4,000,000 into uniform in 90 days after war started.

Since there's no public knowledge of what the Russians are thinking, it's possible they won't be ready to attack by spring or, if they did, are afraid of what this country's atom bombs might do to them.

It isn't positive, of course, that the Russians intend to start a fight at all for if the Allies fall out among themselves Russia might be able to take over without a shot.

Senator Taft isn't convinced the Russians want to attack the United States. He said in a speech last Friday: "I do not myself see any conclusive evidence."

Still, Taft said, he thinks the possibility of a "destructive war against our liberty" is greater than at any time since the Revolutionary war and he thinks this country should prepare for war.

On the radio Sunday he said he thought creation of a great international army in Europe might induce the Russians to go to war and therefore be an incentive to war rather than a defense against it.

Whether President Truman thinks the Russians will start war by spring isn't known, or

Equipment Key to Arming Europe

By ELON C. FAY

Washington, Jan. 8 —(AP)— The speed with which Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Western European command gets battle-ready new divisions will be governed in great measure by how fast they can be equipped.

That this has been given high priority among the multitude of problems confronting the supreme commander is indicated in the fact that among those called to Eisenhower's first luncheon conference after his arrival in Paris yesterday was William Bitt.

Bitt, the ECA ambassador who works out of London, is responsible for spending European military production.

Initially, the combined ground force under Eisenhower will have 10 divisions drawn from the various North Atlantic Treaty members. The objective is something over 40 divisions — unless Russia should launch war and require hundreds instead of scores of Allied divisions to hold her.

To equip 30 or more modern divisions with small arms, mortars, artillery, tanks, air defense detection equipment, communications systems, clothing and ammunition is a huge task — measured by any production scale.

To get the defensive system going, the United States set up its military assistance program (MAP). That program is intended to do two things:

Draw upon existing stocks of American weapons, including quantities of World War II equipment, to get arms to the Western European divisions already in existence.

rather he hasn't said anything about it publicly. But this country's defense plans don't seem to be built around the expectation of an outbreak in the spring.

In his radio talk to the nation Dec. 15 Mr. Truman said the Communists are willing to "push the world to the brink of a general war" and "Europe and the rest of the world are in great danger."

He pointed out that at the time of the Korean outbreak this country had 1,500,000 men under arms, that now it has about 2,500,000, and he wants this raised to 3,500,000 as soon as possible.

But how many troops is the President planning to send to Europe and when?

When General J. Lawton Collins returned from a European trip Dec. 21 he told reporters some troops would be sent to Europe before next July 1, but he didn't say how many.

Anyway, if the Russians decide to move in the spring, the opposition on the ground won't be much; the Western European nations won't have enough troops by then, and this country won't have enough there for there's been nothing to indicate it intended to provide all the troops necessary to stop the Russians.

Troubled UN Moves to New Building

United Nations, N. Y., Jan. 8 —(AP)— The United Nations moved officially into its $65,000,000 Manhattan headquarters today, but the organization's crowd-drawing activities still will take place at Lake Success.

Meeting rooms for the security council, the economic and social council and the six main committees are not yet finished. These bodies will continue to function in one wing of the Sperry Gyroscope plant at Lake Success, on Long Island 15 miles from the new building.

The press and documents sections will also remain at the old building.

Although a majority of the U. N.'s 3,300 employees have moved to half-furnished offices in the 23-story Manhattan building, the structure is still largely unfinished. Moving costs have already passed $300,000.

Diplomats, secretariat and visitors enter over a 1,000-foot swaying wooden catwalk. Underneath is a 250-car garage being built under the 17-acre site which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., purchased for $8,500,000 and deeded to the U. N. in 1940.

The United States lent the U. N. the money to start construction costs. Excavation started Sept. 14, 1948 and the secretariat building began receiving its first occupants in July, 1950. Four New York construction firms cooperated.

The site extends from East 42nd to 48th streets between First avenue and the East River drive.

New York City has so far spent over $25,000,000 to roof over the north-south arteries and make other traffic and utility improvements for the world organization.

It intends to widen 47th street west to Lexington avenue, providing a monumental approach to the headquarters which city officials expect to become the No. one tourist attraction in this most-visited city in the United States.

The main secretariat building is already well worth seeing.

Designed by an international group of architects headed by Wallace K. Harrison, who did much of Rockefeller Center, the structure represents a radical departure from conventional construction.

11 Persons Perish in Fires

By The Associated Press

Eleven persons died in fires in Arkansas during the first week of 1951, eight of them over the weekend.

Three Negro women died when fire destroyed a four-room frame house near Sweet Home, five miles southeast of Little Rock, Sunday.

Pulaski county officers identified them as Emma Boddy, 55; her daughter, Dorothy Jones, 24; and a roomer, Margaret Richardson, 20.

Another farmhouse fire, three miles south of Grady, snuffed out the lives of four of the eight members of the Jim Sam Lemond family.

Lemond and two daughters, Mrs. Evelyn Robinson, 19, died in a Star City hospital Sunday. The body of Opale Lemond, 9, was found in the ruins of the family's home Saturday night.

Mrs. Lemond, two sons and a baby daughter escaped.

In Conway, a 90-year-old farmer, Andrew Walter Hicks, died Sunday of burns suffered at his home south of that city a month ago.

The other three fire fatalities were reported in Little Rock Monday; Camden Tuesday; and in Eudora Wednesday.

Two homicides — both stab-bailings — were reported over the weekend.

Ernest Leslie Morrison, 25, died en route to a Jonesboro hospital Saturday night after being slashed in a fight at Trumann. Police said that Hubert Brown, 28, farmer of Lunford, would be charged with first degree murder in connection with the slaying. He was jailed at Harrisburg.

In Cornerstone, near Pine Bluff, Arthur Fisher, 34, Negro, was slashed to death in an argument over a dice game. Sheriff's deputies arrested another Negro, Theola Johnson, 42.

Two traffic fatalities were reported Sunday. Sila Easterling, 48, house carpenter and painter, died of injuries suffered when he was hit by a car in the Hope business district. Police arrested Billy Burns and charged him with reckless driving.

L. xner, 42, was injured fatally when he was thrown from an automobile as it struck a truck and a bridge near McGehee.

The 12 weekend deaths brought to 21 the Arkansas toll since Jan. 1.

tence or soon to be organized, and to provide the Western European nations with tools for the eventual production of their own military equipment.

But it takes a long time for any production line to begin rolling out quantities of material. And it takes longer in Europe than in the United States.

Even if the Red can step up the output of steel plate, the interval between the plate production and the time when the first tank can roll off an assembly line in a Western European factory is long.

Congressmen Want on Probe Committee

Washington, Jan. 8 —(AP)— An estimated 100 house members this week are seeking membership on a committee to probe American activities.

There are two committee vacancies — one Democratic and one Republican — caused by the defeat of Rep. McSwain (D.)

and the election of former Sen. Nixon (R-Calif.) to the senate.

Requests for the assignments flooded the leadership of both parties.

The sudden rise in interest in the committee is attributed by congressmen to a belief that committee membership is a good thing alone in the senate or to a tenure in the house.

Indeed, it is one of the most coveted of all congressional commodities and its members have in the bulk of the nation's books.

In November's election, two Democratic committee members, Case of South Dakota, elected to the senate. Proand another Republican member of South Dakota, moved to the senate.

Many years ago, however, the committee was different. Members were encountered in their elections. Recent years, in addition to McSwain, were Van (Ill.) and Mc-

Swain (R-Pa.), both of whom were elected in 1948. A former chairman, Patrick Thomas (R-N.J.), died after his conviction on a
